Marine Environment
Protection Directorate

active participation clean seas

Protection of the marine environment is vital for our country and strictly related to our economic and cultural growth

For Greece, a maritime country surrounded by sea and a great number of islands, the effective marine environment protection is of utmost importance

Active participation of all of us for marine environment protection is our right and also our obligation

With coordinated acts and collaboration we can all contribute to the protection of our natural wealth

Marine environment is threatened by:

- litter in the sea and coast
- wastes from port facilities
- operational and accidental pollution from ships
- wastes of landbased sources

ACTIVE PARTICIPATION MARINE ENVIRONMENT PROTECTION

Keep the sea and coasts clean

Always use garbage bins when on shore or on board

Immediately inform the nearest coast guard authority for any pollution incident that comes to your attention

Give details on the location, time, kind, quantity and source of pollution
